

Nothing makes me despair of the future of this country like watching television news. I have been forced to rely on the BBC for basic information about world events. The BBC is government-run, but is much more free-spirited than our media, all of which is owned by a few companies who repeatedly sacrifice truth to the financial bottom line.